Extract A Economic independence

China is Taiwan's most important trading partner and it is the main destination for Taiwan's exports. Much of Taiwan's foreign direct investment also goes to China. Since the 1980s over 100 000 Taiwanese firms moved to China to set up their manufacturing facilities. They were attracted by cheap labour and a large Chinese market. 5

After the USA imposed tariffs on several Chinese-made goods in 2018, Taiwanese firms started moving production from China to other countries. The average tariff is 19.3% on US imports from China.

The Taiwanese Government believed that it was essential for Taiwan to become less dependent on China. This was supported by a three-year reshoring plan, starting in 2019, that involved encouraging domestic firms to move back to Taiwan. This plan included: 10

- incentives that made it easier to buy land and register property
- investment in infrastructure to ensure the continuous provision of gas, electricity and water supply
- subsidies and tax incentives for the technology sector. 15

Taiwanese firms agreed to invest $33 billion in Taiwan between 2019 and 2021. However, of that amount, only $6.8 billion was invested in 2019 and only $1.1 billion in 2020. This reluctance to invest was mainly because several large Taiwanese firms were discouraged from relocating back to Taiwan. Bureaucracy and severe shortages of highly skilled labour were the two most significant reasons given by these firms. 20

Even before the reshoring plan, the Taiwanese Government had initiated the New Southbound Policy (NSP) in 2016 to reduce its economic dependence on China. This policy was designed to increase trade between Taiwan and countries in South Asia and Southeast Asia. However, China accounted for nearly 40% of Taiwan's exports in 2019, twice that of the countries covered by the NSP. China also has strong trade links with Southeast Asian countries. This has limited the extent to which Taiwan can promote its own trade relationships and cooperation with these countries. 25

Tourism is another sector where Taiwan has reduced its reliance on China. However, Taiwan has made up for the fall in Chinese tourists by attracting more visitors from Japan and countries in Southeast Asia. 30

Reducing dependency on China for tourism and trade will not be easy and it is becoming an important issue for a number of countries.
